

Print Page | Close Window

Steering without levers

Printed From: pedalcars.info
Forum Name: Construction tips
Forum Discription: Car construction hints, tips, or pleas for advice
URL: http://www.pedalcars.info/forum/forum\_posts.asp?TID=2443
Printed Date: 02 April 2009 at 13:33
Software Version: Web Wiz Forums 7.51a - <http://www.webwizforums.com>

Topic: Steering without levers

---

Posted By: sparky1972
Subject: Steering without levers
Date Posted: 24 April 2007 at 13:31

I notice a large number of the cars pictured use a lever steering system

Is there a rule restriction or height restriction on having a steering wheel ???

Thanks

Sparky

Replies:

---

Posted By: Neil
Date Posted: 24 April 2007 at 14:02

sparky1972 wrote:

I notice a large number of the cars pictured use a lever steering system

Is there a rule restriction or height restriction on having a steering wheel ???

Thanks

Sparky

no - although a steering wheel would tend to get in the way of the knees. These pictures show some of the cars that dont use lever steering.

Neil

Posted By: webmaster

Date Posted: 24 April 2007 at 14:13

And here's another one:

This is the Royce car from Ringwood (yes, Royce as in, gorgeous shiny top-end bike bits).

It's still basically a T-bar on a steering column, but formed into a shape approaching the top half of a rather large (think 1930's Bentley) steering wheel.

-----

It's chess on wheels

il Padrino

---

Print Page | Close Window

Powered by Web Wiz Forums version 7.51a - <http://www.webwizforums.com>
Copyright ©2001-2003 Web Wiz Guide - <http://www.webwizguide.info>